Investment Commentary

Market conditions deteriorated very meaningfully during March, with global risk sentiment shifting decisively to the downside. The escalation of hostilities involving the United States, Israel and Iran introduced a significant external shock, centred on energy supply disruptions which unsettled financial markets and prompted a broad retreat from risk assets. The effective closure of key shipping routes through the Strait of Hormuz heightened concerns around sustained supply constraints, driving a sharp increase in oil prices and forcing investors to reassess both inflation expectations and the likely path of monetary policy. In this environment, traditional diversification benefits weakened, with equities, bonds, and gold coming under pressure, while the US dollar strengthened as capital moved toward perceived safe haven assets.

US equity markets experienced a notable pullback over the course of the month, briefly entering correction territory before recovering modestly into month-end. The S&P 500 declined by approximately 5%, while the Nasdaq 100 and Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) recorded losses of around 4.9% and 5.4%, respectively.

Central bank policy remained a focal point for markets. The Federal Reserve opted to leave interest rates unchanged at its March meeting, while signalling increased uncertainty around the outlook, particularly in light of rising energy prices. Government bond yields moved higher in response, with the US ten-year Treasury yield climbing to approximately 4.3%, as market participants adjusted expectations for the timing and extent of potential policy easing.

European markets were particularly vulnerable during the period, reflecting the region's reliance on imported energy, with equity indices across the euro area declining sharply.

In Asia, performance was uneven but generally negative. Japanese equities were among the hardest hit, given the country's dependence on external energy sources. In US dollar terms, the Nikkei 225 Index declined by approximately 14.6% in March. Chinese markets, however, declined more moderately, supported in part by domestic economic developments and comparatively lower exposure to disruptions linked to Middle Eastern supply routes. In US dollar terms, the Shanghai CSI 300 Index declined by approximately 6.1% in March.

Emerging markets faced a challenging backdrop, with the asset class retreating significantly as global risk appetite weakened. The combination of elevated energy prices, tighter financial conditions and a stronger US dollar created headwinds for many emerging economies, particularly those reliant on imported oil from the Gulf. As a result, the MSCI Emerging Markets Index declined by approximately 13% versus the MSCI World Index that declined by a more moderate 6.4%. It should be noted, however, that due to the fact that EM equity markets in the east close much earlier than western market counterparts, they did not benefit from the Trump-induced bounce on the 31st, and the gain of 4.33% was only felt on 1 April.

Risk Definitions

Compliance Risk

This refers to the risk of not complying with the legislation, regulations, prescribed investment limits and internal policies and procedures by the manager or the portfolio manager.

Concentration Risk

Unit Trusts pool the assets of many investors and use the proceeds to buy a portfolio of securities. There are regulations in place which limit the amount that a unit trust may invest in securities, thereby spreading the risk across securities, asset classes and companies.

Currency Risk / Foreign Exchange Risk

This risk is associated with investments that are denominated in foreign currencies. When the foreign currencies fluctuate against the South African Rand, the investments face currency gains or losses.

Credit Risk

Credit risk arises where an issuer of a non-equity security or a swap is unable to make interest payments or to repay capital. The Fund may be exposed to credit risk on the counterparties in relation to instruments such as cash, bonds and swaps that are not traded on a recognised exchange. The possibility of the insolvency, bankruptcy or default of a counterparty with which the Fund trades such instruments, could result in losses to the Fund.

Inflation Risk

The risk of potential loss in the purchasing power of your investment due to a general increase of consumer prices.

Political Risk

The risk that investment returns could suffer as a result of a country's political changes or instability in the country. Instability could come from changes in the country's government, policy makers or military.

Liquidity Risk

This relates to the ability of the unit trust to trade out of a security held in the portfolio at or near to its fair value. This may impact on liquidity and in the case of foreign securities, the repatriation of funds.

Market Risk

Equity markets are volatile and the price of equities fluctuate based on a number of factors such as changes in the economic climate, general movements in interest rates and the political and social environment which will also affect the value of the securities held in the unit trust, thereby affecting the overall value of the unit trust.

Settlement Risk

Settlement risk arises when a fund is exposed to credit risk on parties with whom it trades securities, and may also bear the risk of settlement default, in particular in relation to debt securities such as bonds, notes and similar debt obligations or instruments

Tax Risk

This risk relates to any change to tax laws or to the interpretation of existing tax laws which has an impact on the manner in which unit trusts are taxed.
